

Student Communication

Published on Masters Programs Office (<https://networth.rhsmith.umd.edu>)

The Robert H. Smith School of Business recognizes the importance of keeping all students up to date on the latest information and events at the Smith School. As a result, the Smith School has made a major commitment to use email as the principle mode of administrative communication between the faculty, Masters Programs Office, and the student body. Additionally, the Smith School website provides students with up to date information along with convenient electronic links to many valuable resources within the University. It is the responsibility of the student to stay informed. Email accounts and the website are important mediums of communication and students should check them frequently. Email group lists are established for communicating with student groups and messages sent to these addresses are also seen by the masters faculty and staff.
